The Denver Regional Transportation District (RTD) Transit Police will implement the active bystander law enforcement (ABLE) program this year to enhance accountability and intervention.

- RTD leaders say the training reinforces professionalism and integrity at every level, helping officers protect both the community and each other.

Why it matters: ABLÉ empowers officers to prevent mistakes and misconduct, fostering a culture where every officer can voice concerns and support each other.

- Officers learn to intervene effectively, reducing the risk of errors and promoting well-being.
- The program is rooted in research from the Georgetown Law Center, emphasizing prevention and health.

What's next: Four Denver RTD officers will undergo ABLÉ training this summer to become certified instructors.

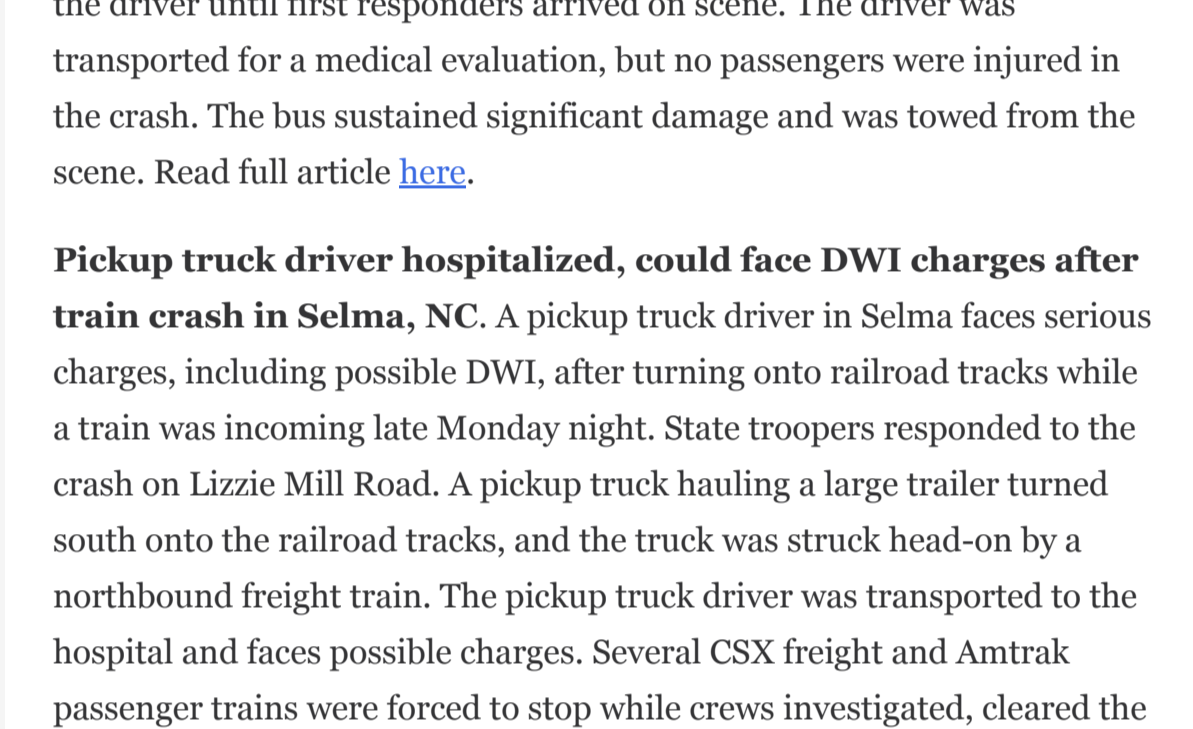

- The four officers will lead training sessions for other officers by the end of 2026, with annual refresher courses.
- Other Colorado agencies have already adopted the ABLÉ program including the Colorado State Patrol, the Attorney General's Office, and the Denver Police Department.

The backdrop: Originating from the Ethical Policing is Courageous \(EPIC\) program launched by the New Orleans Police Department in 2014, ABLÉ expanded post-2020 in collaboration with Georgetown University Law Center.

- Over 300 law enforcement agencies have embraced ABLÉ across the U.S. and Canada.

Transit Crime:

Suspect killed a woman before boarding a bus and then being shot to death by police officers in Washington, DC. A woman being shot and killed in NW D.C. Tuesday morning led to the suspect escaping via Metrobus and eventually being killed by an officer on that bus, according to DC Police. The deadly bus shooting unfolded after a man armed with a long gun shot and killed a woman in the 3600 block of Wisconsin Avenue NW and then jumped on a Metrobus bus at Porter Street NW. Investigators quickly identified the bus the suspect boarded before following the bus. Police pulled the bus over in the 4000 block of Wisconsin Avenue. While police were clearing passengers off the bus, the suspect reached into a bag, produced a firearm, and pointed it at officers. Despite multiple warnings to drop the weapon, two officers were forced to fire on the suspect resulting in his death. Officers and passengers were uninjured. Read full article here.

1 killed, 2 injured on Hotard charter bus in Bessemer, AL. A Hotard charter bus was carrying 40 security guards back to New Orleans from work at a weekend music festival in Tennessee. The bus was parked in a Walmart parking lot in Bessemer when a fight broke out between the three fellow passengers. The driver attempted to intervene and was uninjured. One victim was transported to a local hospital in serious condition and later died at the hospital. The conditions of the two additional stabbing victims were not released. The suspect was arrested near the scene. A second bus transported the passengers to their destination in New Orleans. Read full article here.
